the author of THE SHOW OF VIOLENCE and DARK LEGEND

Fredric Wenham, M.D., worked with Professor Adolf Meyer at Johns Hopkins for seven years, teaching and doing research. He was the first American psychiatrist to be awarded a research fellowship by the National Research Council. In 1932, he organized and directed the first psychiatric clinic in a major court where all convicted felom got a psychiatric examination, the results reported to the judges. Since then, his main psychiatric interest, aside from his private patients, has been the practice and organization of psychotherapy in mental hygiene clinics.

Dr. Wertham has been director of some of the largest clinics in the country: the mental hygiene clinic of Bellevue Hospital, New York, and also Queens Hospital Center, He has organized two free clinics – the Quaker Emergency Service Readjustment Center (devoted entirely to the psychotherapy of sexual difficulties) and the Lafargue Clinic, located in the heart of a slum area in Harlem, the first psychiatric clinic to be opened in that district.

He is the author of many articles and books, among them "The Brain as an Organ," and the best-selling "Dark Legend" and "The Show of Violence."
