Story of Osiris

- Killed by his evil brother SET.
- Body was cut up into 14 pieces and spread throughout the world.
- Wife, Isis, found all body parts and brought him back to life
- Son, Horus, will later seek revenge on Set and kill him.
- He did not return to the world of the living but reigned as judge of the dead.

Egyptian Afterlife

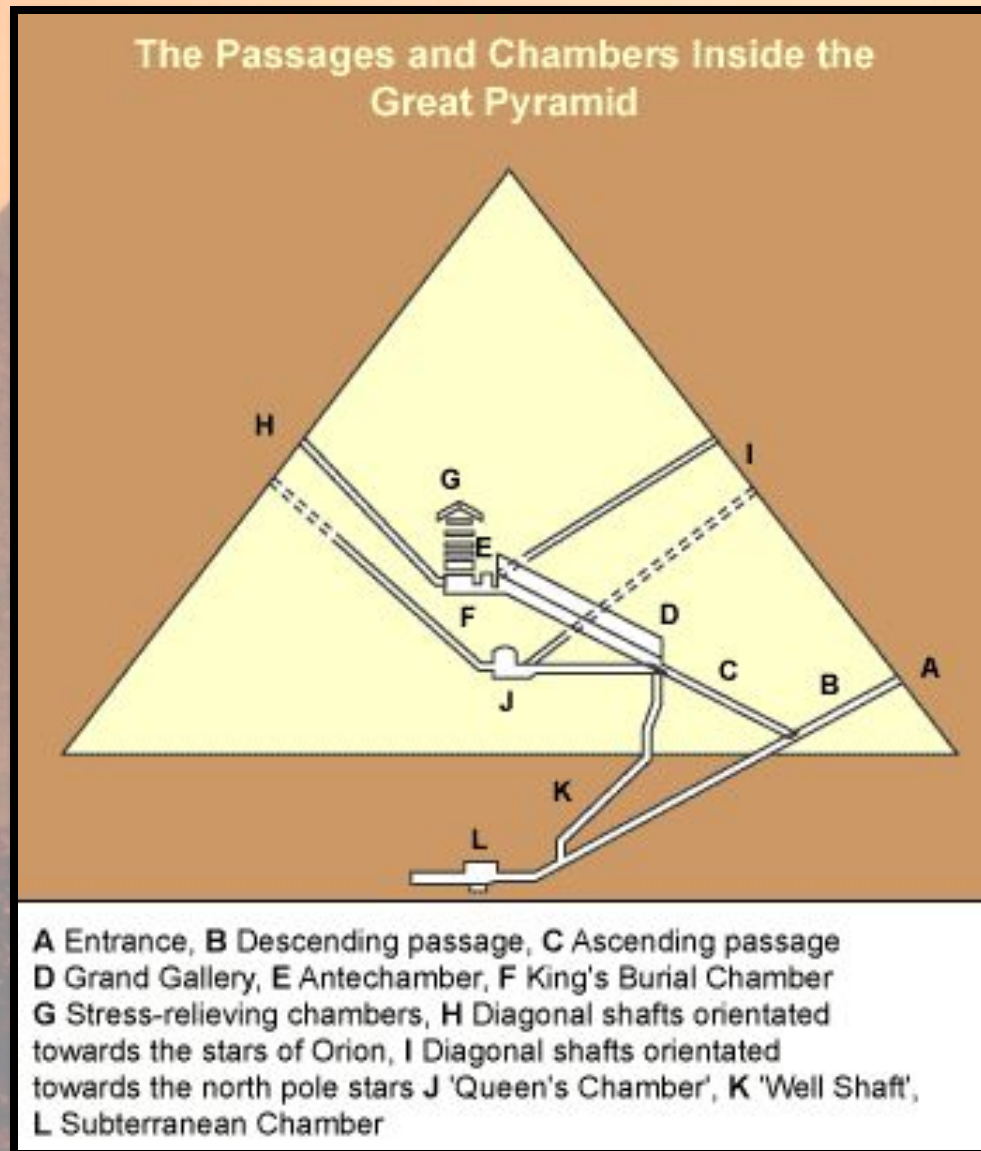

- The Egyptians believed in life after death
- When you die, you go to the underworld where Osiris judges you
- He weighs your heart against a feather (symbol of truth)
- If heart is light (innocence), one goes to the OTHER WORLD, (Happy Field of Flood)
- If heart is heavy (guilt), one is fed to Ammit, the DEVOURER OF SOULS, crocodile shaped Eater of the Dead

Egyptian Afterlife

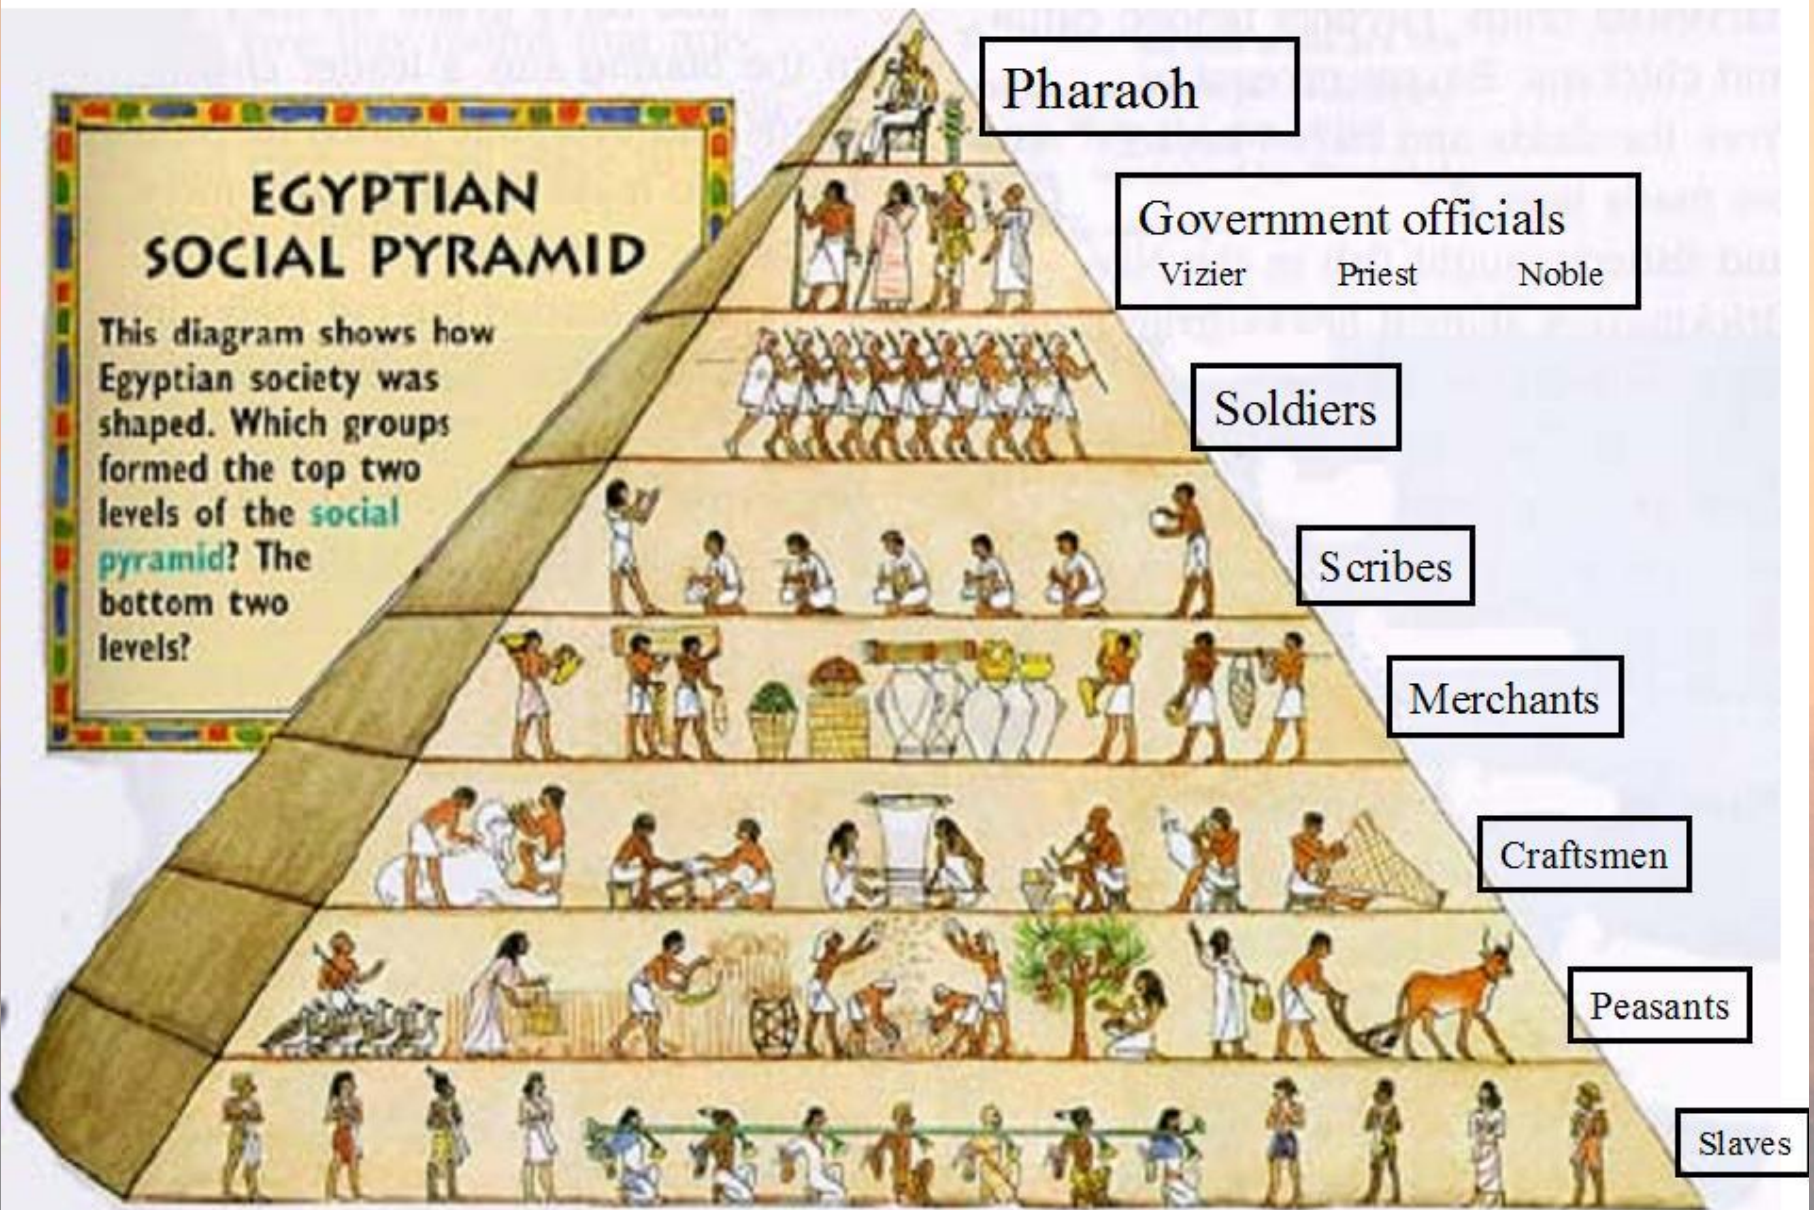

- Egyptians looked forward to their afterlife and planned well for life after death.
- PYRAMIDS: burial tombs for the kings.
- They would be filled with food and riches to go with them into the afterlife.
- Egyptian people worked on the building of the pyramids 3 months a year during flood season.

Arts of ancient Egypt

- Ancient Egyptian art reached a high level in painting and sculpture, and was both highly stylized and symbolic.

Arts of ancient Egypt

Painting

- Not all Egyptian reliefs were painted, and less prestigious works in tombs, temples and palaces were merely painted on a flat surface.

Sculpture

- The monumental sculpture of ancient Egypt's temples and tombs is world-famous, but refined and delicate small works exist in much greater numbers.

Arts of ancient Egypt

Architecture

- Ancient Egyptian architects used sun-dried and kiln-baked bricks, fine sandstone, limestone and granite. Architects carefully planned all their work.

Hieroglyphs

- Hieroglyphs are the ancient Egyptian writing system in which pictures and symbols stand for sounds and words. Jean-Francois Champollion first decoded hieroglyphs from the Rosetta Stone, which was found in 1799. Hieroglyphs have more than 700 symbols.
