Most often, students try to get a job as salespeople, including consultants and cashiers, administrators and waiters. Such conclusions were made by analysts of the HeadHunter service.

"The list of the most active professions in the search for employment of young people also includes: a customer service manager, an accountant, a driver, an office manager, a storekeeper, a sales representative, a system administrator, a call center operator, a loader, an electric and gas welder," - gives details of the study. RIA News. According to the service, since January 2021, students and young professionals have been looking for jobs more often than others: since the beginning of the year, they have uploaded or updated nearly a million resumes. Next come job seekers from the sales sector and administrative staff. The top five also includes specialists in the field of IT, Internet, telecom, transport and logistics.
