Features of the ritual of burning the effigy of winter on Shrovetide

As an effigy, which is sacrificed, a large funny and at the same time terrible doll was made, personifying Maslenitsa. They made a doll out of rags and straw. After that, she was dressed up in women's clothing and left on the main street of the village during Shrovetide Week. And on Sunday, they were solemnly carried outside the village. There the effigy was burned, drowned in an ice-hole, or torn to pieces, and the straw left over from it was scattered over the field. The ritual burning of the doll had a deep meaning: to destroy the symbol of winter is necessary for the resurrection of its power in the spring.
