

defective
detective

PAST CONTINUOUS
PAST SIMPLE

While Detective Julien _____ (investigate) the "Butcher" case, the criminal _____ (be) still wanted by the FBI.

While Detective Julien _____ (read) the newspaper, the serial killer _____ (be) still on the run.

When the journalist _____ (write) the article, Detective Julien still _____ (not/know) the real identity of the bloody "Butcher".

The detective _____ (think) about the case when he suddenly _____ (hear) a strange noise coming from the flat above.

Blood _____ (drip) on his newspaper while he _____ (listen) to the suspicious noise coming from the old lady's flat.

The old lady _____ (cook) tomato soup when, all of a sudden, a mouse _____ (knock) the saucepan over and _____ (spill) the soup all over the floor.

While the rat _____ (lick) the delicious tomato soup the old lady _____ (have) a nervous breakdown.

When the rat _____ (try) to escape through the window
the grandma _____ (throw) a tomato to kill the pest.

The detective _____ (spy) on her neighbour while she _____ (chase) the rodent.

The tomato _____ (hit) the window while Detective Julien _____ (peep) into the kitchen.

Detective Julien _____ (imagine) that the Butcher
_____ (slice) the grandma into pieces.

The old lady _____ (kill) the rat, _____ (throw) it in the garbage, and _____ (go) back to her cooking.

The detective _____ (climb) through the window to get inside. He _____ (not/come) through the door to catch the Butcher.

The detective _____ (switch) on the lamp because he _____ (not/can) see anything in the dark.

The detective _____ (hug) the walls because he _____ (not/want) to be seen by the serial killer.

The detective _____ (look) for clues with a magnifying glass while the grandma _____ (prepare) her supper.

The old lady _____ (smell) the tomato soup while she _____ (stir) it.

While the grandma _____ (mix) her soup with a wooden spoon the detective _____ (hide) in the hallway.

When the grandma _____ (turn) on the cooker to heat another batch of soup, the detective _____ (pray) for dear life.

The old lady _____ (chop) more tomatoes while the detective's heart _____ (beat) faster.

While Detective Julien _____ (fan) his face he _____ (can) hear the sound of the knife blade chopping the grandma into pieces.

The old lady _____ (grate) more tomatoes while Detective Julien _____ (panic).

Detective Julien _____ (suck) his thumb while he _____ (hold) a teddy bear.

Detective Julien _____ (suck) his thumb when the grandma suddenly _____ (turn) the blender on.

When the detective _____ (hear) the sound of the blender, he _____ (take) out his asthma inhaler.

The old lady _____ (hold) a pot when, all of a sudden, the detective _____ (shoot) at the "murderer".

The old lady _____ (not/handle) it really well as she suddenly _____ (fly) into a white rage.

In an angry outburst, she suddenly (toss) a frying pan at the detective's face.

The detective _____ (fall) on the floor and _____ (be) knocked out for a while.

While they _____ (eat) their soup, the detective _____ (hold) an ice pack.

When Detective Julien _____ (hear) another suspicious noise, he immediately _____ (stand) up and _____ (grab) his gun.

When his neighbour _____ (look) daggers at him he _____ (pretend) it _____ (be) only a joke.

Finally, he _____ (sit) back on his chair.
That night, he _____ (not/catch) the Butcher but, at least,
he _____ (enjoy) a bowl of delicious tomato soup...

To be continued...

