History

The first Libertarian National Convention was held in June 1972. In 1978, Dick Randolph of Alaska became the first elected Libertarian state legislator.

June 1972

Following the 1980 federal elections, the Libertarian Party assumed the title of being the third-largest party for the first time after the American Independent Party and the Conservative Party of New York.

In 1996, the Libertarian Party became the first third party to earn ballot status in all 50 states two presidential elections in a row. By the end of 2009, 146 Libertarians were holding elected offices

Structure and composition

- Libertarian National Committee

The Libertarian National Committee (LNC) controls and manages the affairs, properties, and funds of the United States Libertarian Party. It is composed of the party officers, five at-large representatives elected every two years at the national convention, and a theoretical maximum of 10 regional representatives.

- State chapters

Since the Libertarian Party's inception, individuals have been able to join the party as voting members by signing their agreement with the organization's membership pledge, which states that the signer does not advocate the initiation of force to achieve political or social goals.

- Membership

Most rights to participate in the governance of the party are limited to "bylaws-sustaining members" who have either purchased a lifetime membership or donated at least $25 within the past year.

Amash becomes first LP member of US Congress

Rep. Justin Amash (L-Mich.) recently made history, becoming the first sitting Libertarian member of Congress. Amash, originally elected as a Republican in Michigan's 3rd district, changed his registration to Independent in July, 2019, prior to voting for the impeachment of President Donald Trump in December on charges of abuse of power and obstruction of Congress. He announced his move to the LP on April 28 and the Clerk of the House of Representatives officially acknowledged the change on May 1.

"I'm happy to see that Representative Amash has come home to the political party most closely aligned with his views," LNC Chair Nicholas Sarwark wrote in an email to Reason.com. "If more members of the House who are tired of being marginalized by the GOP and Democratic leadership joined him, we could see a caucus of legislators who are able to work for the American people instead of conflicting teams of special interests. My DMs are open."

The official Libertarian Party Twitter account celebrated the announcement on May 1, echoing Sarwark's invitation to other members of Congress, along with an image simply exclaiming, "Welcome Home!"

LP Illinois wins major ballot access case amid COVID-19 struggles

By Amanda Parsons

LPIL Communications Director

The Libertarian Party of Illinois asked Gov. JB Pritzker and the Illinois Board of Elections to forgive the ballot access requirements

25,000 signatures, to the 5,000 that established parties are required to collect. Usually, new parties must double that amount in case of challenges. Petitioning technically started on March 24, but shelter-in-place orders made it nearly impossible for candidates to be collected remotely. She stated that candidates could mail petitions to voters, share a digital file online, or send it by email. Voters could print them out, sign it, and send it through the mail, in an email attachment or photograph. She also stated that voters could also sion brought the requirement down to 2,500. In addition, the LPIL may place candidates on the November ballot without filing nominating petitions for any offices that had candidates in either the 2016 or 2018 general elections. LPIL will be able to place both
