

Unusual
hotels that are built from the most unexpected
materials

by Anastasia Meret'ska

Quirky designs, unusual decor and strange building materials are a few of the traits of the world's most unusual hotels.

- Some hotels are more than merely a place to sleep while visiting a destination.

- ◎ ICE HOTEL is the world's first and largest hotel built of snow and ice.

It is situated in a small village in Northern Sweden.

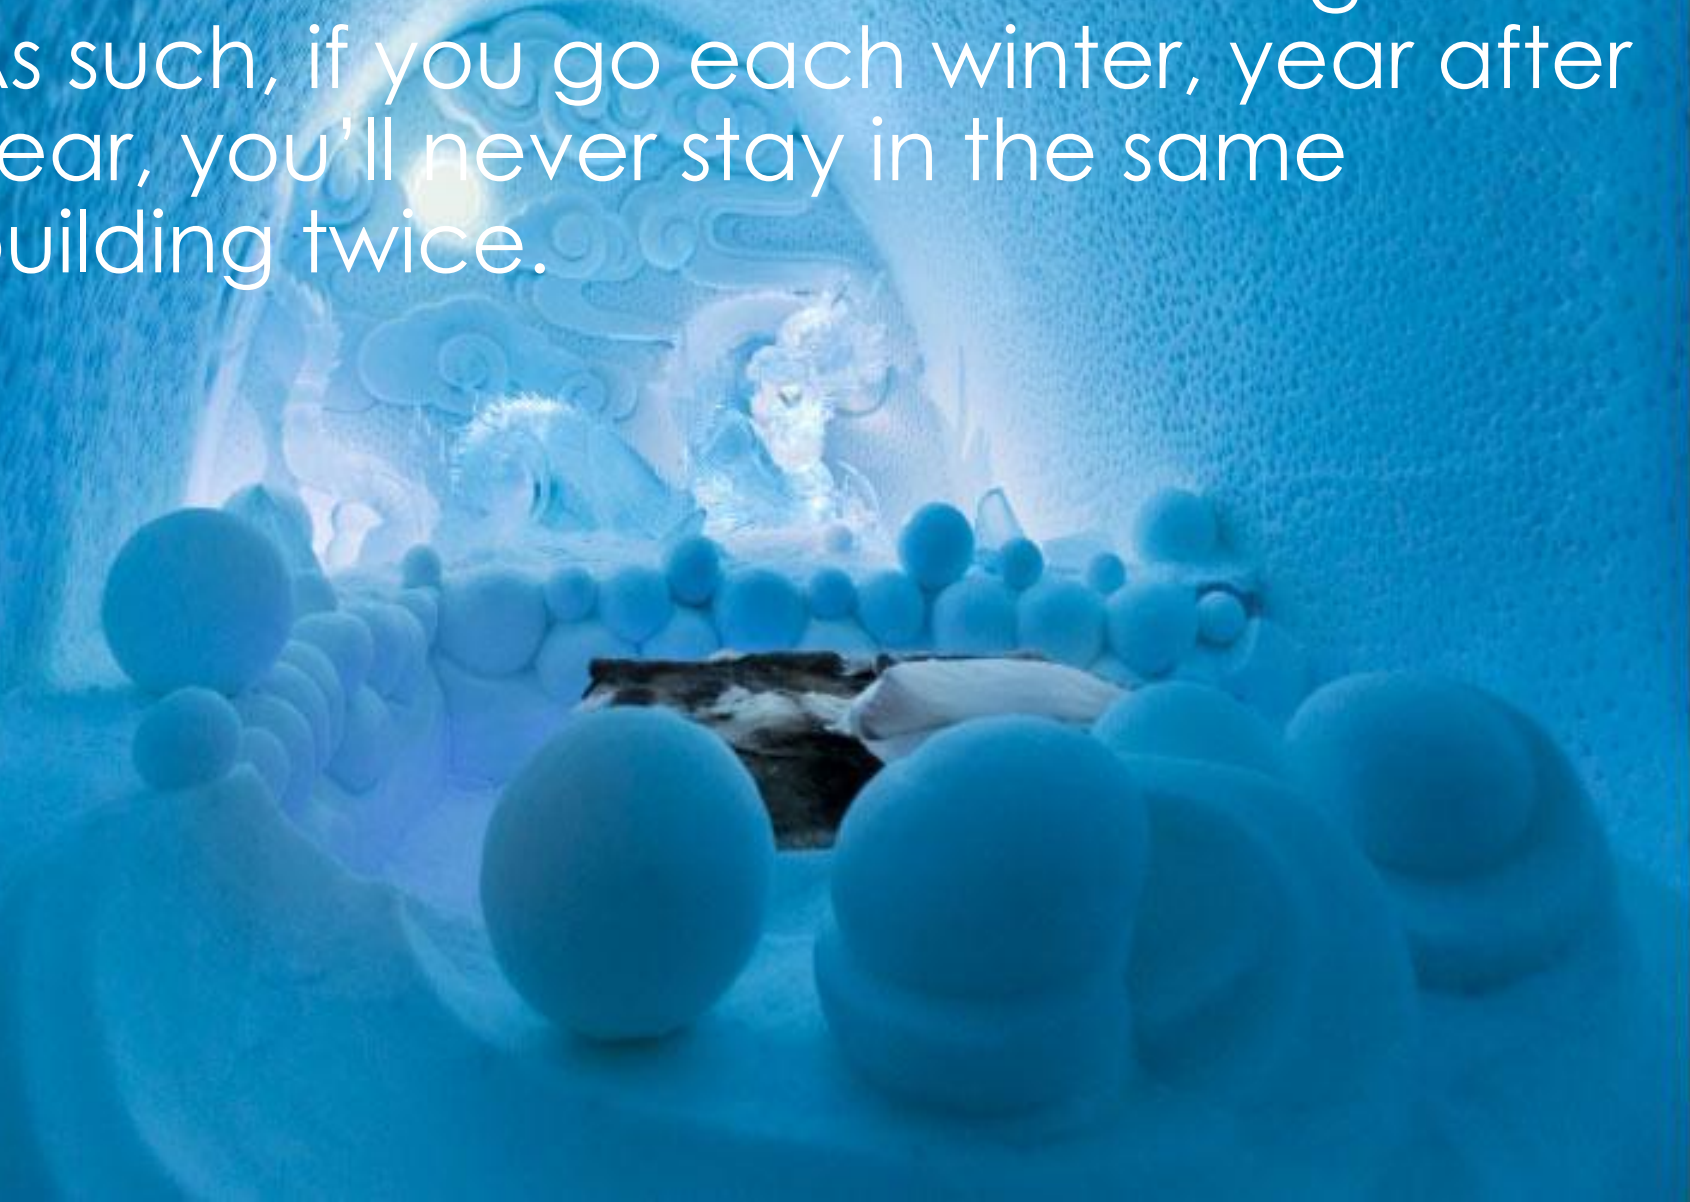

ICE HOTEL
covers 5,500
square meters

and 30,000
tons of “snice”,
a mixture of snow
and ice.

- And each spring the hotel melts ... to be reconstructed a new the following winter. As such, if you go each winter, year after year, you'll never stay in the same building twice.

The Palacio de Sal (meaning Salt Palace) is located on the edge of Bolivia's Salar de Uyuni - the largest salt flat in the world.

The image shows a serene interior space constructed entirely from salt blocks. The walls, floor, and furniture are made of these natural, textured blocks. In the foreground, there are two low, rectangular salt block sofas. Each sofa is topped with a vibrant blue cushion and two smaller square pillows, one in orange and one in olive green. Between the sofas is a low, square salt block table. On the table sits a small, shallow, reddish-brown ceramic bowl containing a small amount of white salt. In the background, more salt block seating and a small decorative object on a table are visible through an arched opening in the wall. The overall atmosphere is calm and minimalist, emphasizing the natural beauty of the salt blocks.

It is a hotel and spa where everything is made entirely of salt.

The walls, floors, ceilings, and even some of the furnishings such as chairs, tables, beds...

- ◉ In order to maintain the integrity of the hotel's structure, it is strictly forbidden to lick the walls.

In 2010 was created the first hotel in the world created
from garbage
- the Beach
Garbage
Hotel.

- ◎ The aim is to raise awareness of the plight of beaches and seas around the world, which are increasingly plagued by garbage. The hotel opened its doors on World Environment Day.

- ◉ The walls of hotel made of materials found in landfills, the beaches and even flea markets.
